

Memorandum of Understanding

Preamble

The field of women's studies was defined in the 1980s as a 'critical perspective' that focused on women's lives and needed to be integrated into all disciplines. In the words of one of its pioneers, it emerged as "a rather nebulous idea that what was necessary was a transformation of structures, of ethos, of quality and behavior through the unity of scientific studies, mobilising action, and spreading awareness among the public, within educational, health and legal systems, among the media and the worlds of creative literature, science and technology." Speaking of the first Women's Studies Conference in India (1981), she added, 'it is this underlying idea that made participants feel that they were taking part in a movement and not just a conference - and led to the decision to form the Association for Women's Studies to maintain momentum.' (Vina Mazumdar [2000], Presidential Address, Xth National Conference, IAWS).

From such pioneering and largely voluntary beginnings, women's studies has indeed come a long way. Following the inclusion of women's studies in the 1986 National Policy on Education, institutional support for the establishment of women's studies centres by the UGC has increased, and the number of centres has multiplied. Today there are 151 UGC supported women's studies centres in universities and colleges across 27 states in India, and another 12 have been sanctioned, bringing in 3 more states. Yet none of these centres are located in Jharkhand, although the state saw some initial attempts some years ago. It is in such a context that new initiatives for stimulating quality women's studies research in and on Jharkhand, for bringing scholars and activists together on issues affecting women of the state, and greater interaction between the pan Indian women's studies community with Jharkhand based students, teachers, researchers and activists is called for. This collaboration between the Indian Association for Women's Studies and the Department of Economics, Ranchi University is thus a small step in that direction.

Memorandum of Understanding

The Indian Association for Women's Studies, hereinafter referred to as the Association, and the University Department of Economics, Ranchi University, hereinafter referred to as the Department do hereby agree to jointly initiate a Jharkhand Women's Studies Project for providing orientation and support for students, teachers, and concerned citizens in the state of Jharkhand to engage with women's studies as an inter-disciplinary field of knowledge. The Jharkhand Women's Studies Project, hereinafter referred to as the Project will encourage and

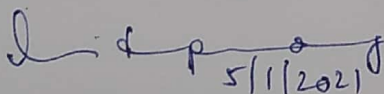

76
S.S.
05/01/2021

The Indian Association for Women's Studies, hereinafter referred to as the Association, and the University Department of Economics, Ranchi University, hereinafter referred to as the Department do hereby agree to jointly initiate a Jharkhand Women's Studies Project for providing orientation and support for students, teachers, and concerned citizens in the state of Jharkhand to engage with women's studies as an inter-disciplinary field of knowledge. The Jharkhand Women's Studies Project, hereinafter referred to as the Project will encourage and enable inter-disciplinary research related to women and gender relations with a focus on the state of Jharkhand. The duration of the Project will be till December, 2024.

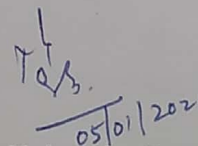

By this memorandum of understanding:

1. The Department agrees to provide a room/space/office for housing the Project. The Association agrees to defray the Project office expenses, comprising of furniture and equipment, and will maintain a stock register.
2. A Project Committee, hereinafter referred to as the Committee, is to be constituted for the overall running of the Project. The Committee will plan and execute various activities comprising of documentation, organizing workshops, seminars, lectures, consultative dialogues, short-term courses and orientation programmes. The Committee shall comprise of Dr. Ranjana Srivastava and two other members of the Department faculty, inclusive of the head of the Department, Mamata Kumari, coordinator of the programme, Ishita Mukhopadhyay, Mini Sukumar and Shadab Bano, President, General Secretary, and Executive Committee member of the Association respectively. The Committee may invite a maximum of four faculty members from other social science departments as invitee members of the Committee.
3. During the course of the Project, the Association will provide internship and one fellowship for a student registered for PhD in any department of Ranchi University, whose research is related to women's studies. The procedure for selection and award of the fellowship may be worked out by the Project Committee.
4. The programme will also design a course on Gender to be implemented for the students in the University.

This Memorandum of Understanding is being executed on the basis of agreement that no financial support is being sought from or committed by the Department and the costs incurred by activities of the Project, including in organizing workshops, seminars, lectures, orientation programmes, promotion of research, etc. in women's studies, will be borne by the Association.

5/1/2021

Ishita Mukhopadhyay
President
Indian Association for Women's Studies,

05/01/2021

HOD, University Department of Economics, Ranchi University.

HEAD

University Department of Economics
Ranchi University, Ranchi